VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN FACT SHEET 2020

Violence against women is a prevalent and serious human rights abuse that causes significant harm to individuals, families, communities and society.

Experiences of violence are gendered, with women and men experiencing different types of violence in different contexts.<sup>1</sup> The majority (95%) of all victims of violence, both women and men, experience violence from a male perpetrator.<sup>2</sup>

This fact sheet details the most recently available data pertaining to violence against women for the 99,952 women who call Whittlesea home.<sup>3</sup>

Violence against women has serious and long-lasting impacts on women's health, including death, injury, suicide and self-harm, anxiety and depressive disorders, and sexual and reproductive health issues. It also has significant economic and social consequences, including homelessness and access to employment. Witnessing family violence has serious consequences on children's health and development.

A NOTE ON DATA

Many women experiencing violence do not report this to police, therefore the local government area (LGA) figures are likely to underestimate the extent of the problem.

Barriers to women reporting violence perpetrated against them include community attitudes, fear of more abuse, social isolation, victim-blaming, sexism and justifications for violence.

While some LGA figures indicate rates below the Victorian average, all people in Whittlesea have the right to live in a safe, equitable and respectful environment that is free from violence.
